

Mini Founders

One week to turn what they love into something they build.

Every mini founder goes deep on something they actually care about – football transfers, gaming, collecting, player stats – and builds a real project around it: a working prototype, not a slideshow. On Friday they show it to family and friends at our Showcase; if people want to buy, that's proof their thing has value. Optional sports morning at Clube Nacional de Natação, lunch included.

From "I love this" to "I built this" in 5 days

No lectures. Kids build a passion project – football stats, gaming, collecting, whatever they love – and every skill shows up exactly when their project needs it: interviews, design, product photos, marketing assets and a podcast episode all happen because their idea demands them.

Ideas

What do you actually care about? Founders go solo or team up, pick a passion project – a fantasy-league helper, a Discord bot for their gaming clan, a sneaker or card price tracker – and use AI to attack and improve it. First page goes live before snack time.

TUE • JUL 28

Validation

Each team builds an online form and interviews real people. Ideas nobody wants die today. Pre-orders open by end of day.

WED • JUL 29

Build + shoot

Make the product. Then a pro-camera photo session and Canva design sprint: logo, posters, social posts. The online shop gets real.

THU • JUL 30

Marketing studio

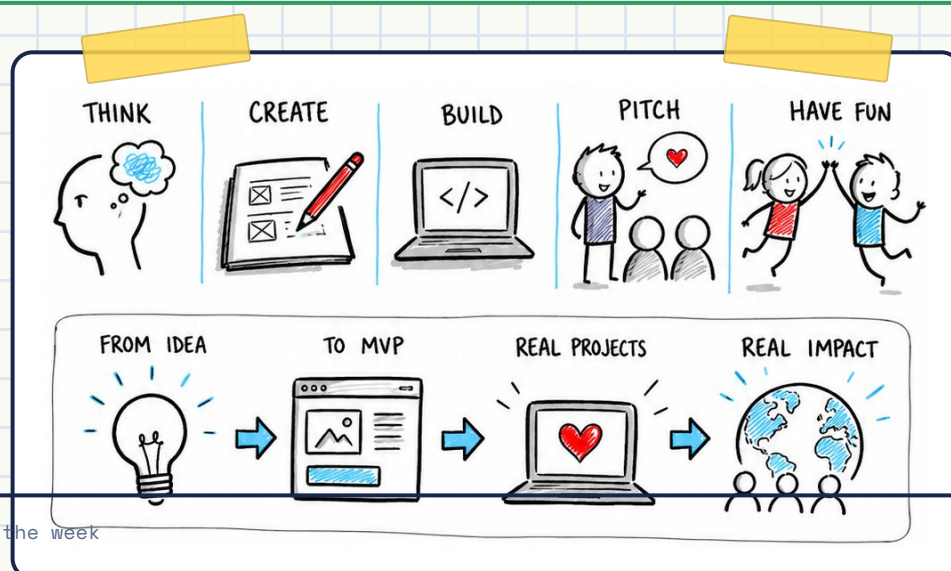

Record a podcast episode with video in our studio to tell the project's story. Edit, publish, share. Prep the pitch for Showcase Day.

SHOW TIME!

Showcase Day

Families invited. Each founder shows what they built, the story behind it and what they'd do next. Visitors who want to buy can – a fun proof the project matters to more people than its maker. Awards, certificates and a proper founder send-off.

what they take home

Skills school doesn't teach yet

Curiosity, creativity, focus – and the product crafting sense to turn what they love into something real. That's what a week of going deep on their own idea trains. All sessions taught in English, with native trainers in English, Portuguese, French and Russian on the floor.

Going deep on what they love

Pick their own obsession – football, gaming, collecting – and own every decision from first idea to finished build. Focus and ownership you can't fake.

AI as a tool to build their idea

Brainstorm, design and ship a working prototype – a stat tracker, a card-swap matcher – with AI, always with an adult at the keyboard. Not magic: a tool, and they learn to be the boss of it.

Talking to real customers

Build a survey, run interviews, hear "no" and change course based on facts. Product validation, ages 10 to 15 edition.

Marketing that ships

Shoot products with pro cameras, design assets in Canva, and record a podcast with video in our studio.

Real-world money sense

Set prices, count costs and margin, give change, track it all on a hand-made dashboard. One skill among six – and math kids actually want to do.

Pitching in English

Tell the story of what they built and the lessons learned to a room full of adults. Confidence you can't get from a worksheet.

Meet the trainers

Real practitioners, not camp animators: people who build, sell and design products for a living, and love teaching kids how it's done.
